

Daniel Halden, DC, Mac, Lacu, PAK, CAC, CVMRT

I am a clinician. Taking care of patients is an integral part of who I am. Part of being a successful practitioner is empowering my patients and clients to make the best possible health care choices by providing them with more complete information and a larger understanding. In this way, I teach all day long, every day.

Teaching in the classroom has been part of my professional life throughout my career. By helping other practitioners practice at a higher level, I am enhancing the health of patients and clients I will never meet. This is a great gift.

At The Healing Oasis, I emphasize the clinical relevance and usefulness of everything that I teach. I want coursework with me to be immediately useful and applicable in the office. One aspect that elevates the learning experience at The O, is that we will always give the students the opportunity to practice and apply classroom work in a clinic setting, on actual patients. This underscores the clinical value of all we do for the practitioner and their patients/clients.